Sloppy Kisses

"Where did you find him?"

Marko adjusted his grip, the soft fur and wiggling body of the puppy making it hard to hold him. "He was a little ways down my street."

Tony felt around his neck, the thick fur nearly fooling him into thinking he had a collar. "He doesn't have any tags so he must be a recent family addition."

"I've phoned-" he began mid-nod, which the dog took as invitation to lick from neck to mouth. "Aggh."

"Someone's in love," Tony chanted, laughing and scratching his fur.

Marko looked to the adorable puppy, silently gagging but agreeing.
